Summary of this inspection

Why we carried out this inspection

We carried out this inspection to check whether Dr Alan Goldman - Manor Road had taken action to meet the following essential standards:

- Cleanliness and infection control

This was an announced inspection.

How we carried out this inspection

We looked at the personal care or treatment records of people who use the service, carried out a visit on 28 April 2014 and talked with staff.

What people told us and what we found

We carried out this responsive follow-up inspection to check that the required improvements to the service had been carried out.

We found that the provider now had effective systems in place that maintained appropriate standards of cleanliness and hygiene to protect people from the risks of a health care related infection.

We found that the surgeries and other areas of the practice were clean and hygienic. New blinds had been purchased and these were made of a material that could be easily cleaned. Computer keyboards in use in the clinical areas were covered with a protective plastic sleeve to prevent dust from gathering.

Cleaning schedules were in place for each surgery and the general areas of the practice. Records had been satisfactorily completed and the provider monitored the quality of the cleaning. An infection control audit had recently been undertaken by the surgery staff and no issues had been identified.

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

Our judgements for each standard inspected

Cleanliness and infection control

✓ Met this standard

People should be cared for in a clean environment and protected from the risk of infection

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People were cared for in a clean, hygienic environment.

Reasons for our judgement

When we last visited the service in January 2014 we found that improvements were required to ensure that people who used the service were protected against the risk of exposure to a health care related infection. We issued a compliance action at that time. Following our visit the provider sent us an action plan detailing how the required improvements were to be achieved.

When we carried out our visit in April 2014 we found that the required improvements had been made.

The provider now had in place cleaning schedules for each surgery. These were completed on a daily basis by the dental nurses who were responsible for maintaining the clinical areas. A schedule was also in use for the cleaning of the other parts of the practice and this was undertaken by a contract cleaner. This reflected the areas to clean and the frequency.

We viewed the cleaning schedules held for a number of weeks and found that they had been fully completed by the person's responsible for the cleaning. In addition each contained the signature of the provider who routinely monitored the quality of the cleaning.

We looked at two surgeries on the day of our visit and found that they were clean and hygienic. Some new blinds had been installed and these were now made of material that could be easily cleaned. Computer keyboards had been covered with a protective plastic sleeve to enable them to be cleaned more easily. Other areas of the practice were also clean and tidy.

The provider also sent us their most recent infection control audit that had been carried out in April 2014. There is a requirement to complete such an audit every six months to ensure that infection control procedures are effective. The audit reflected that the provider had robust and effective cleaning systems at the practice and this reduced the risk and spread of infection.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

 Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

 Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

 Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.
