Summary of this follow up review

Why we carried out this review

We carried out an inspection on 07 August 2014 and published a report setting out our judgements. We asked the provider to send us a report of the changes they would make to comply with the standards they were not meeting.

We have followed up to make sure that the necessary changes have been made and found the provider is now meeting the standard(s) included within this report. This report should be read in conjunction with the full inspection report.

We have not revisited Inwood House as part of this review because Inwood House were able to demonstrate that they were meeting the standards without the need for a visit.

How we carried out this review

We looked at the personal care or treatment records of people who use the service.

We have not revisited Inwood House as part of this review.

What we found about the standards we followed up

We found the provider had made improvements to recording systems and guidelines. This supported staff to care for people in a way which promoted their health safety and well-being.

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

People should get safe and appropriate care that meets their needs and supports their rights

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

Care and treatment was planned and delivered in a way which was intended to ensure people's health, welfare and safety.

Reasons for our judgement

In our inspection of 7 August 2014 we found that care and treatment was not always planned and delivered in a way that was intended to ensure people's safety and welfare.

Some important risk issues such as mobility were not included in the short care plans. The descriptions of how staff were to keep people safe were lengthy and complex. Some risk assessments lacked detail and did not contain the necessary information to minimise risks to people. Well - being charts were not always completed consistently. Health care records were not always easy to follow, accurate or up-to-date. The home dealt appropriately with any unexplained bruising but did not always look into or record how it may have occurred. Behaviour plans were not detailed enough to support staff in the safest way of dealing with distressing or harmful behaviours.

We asked the provider to send us a report by 13 September 2014 to tell us what action they were going to take to meet the compliance action made. The provider wrote to us on 28 August and told us that they had completed some actions and were going to be fully compliant by 26 September 2014.

They sent us new documents and guidelines they had introduced to ensure recording was accurate. These included an unexplained injury report document which included a specific area to record the investigation and outcome . A medical history form to make it clear the results of health visits and any follow up appointments that were necessary. Detailed information about what action staff should take in the event of an individual's behaviour deteriorating was produced as a behavioural flow chart. We saw team meeting minutes where the outcome of the inspection and the actions taken as a result were discussed, in detail. Staff were asked if they fully understood the improvements and it was stressed that they had to be maintained.

The provider told us they were going to review all risk assessments by 26 September 2014 and ensure fluid charts were re-designed by 5 September 2014.

On the 21 October 2014 the registered manager sent us evidence that they had completed the actions they had described in their report of 28 August 2014. We saw two completed risk assessments which included use of inhalers and anxiety. There was a section which detailed how staff were to support people to minimise the identified risks. We were sent samples of the new food and fluid charts which had been in use since September 2014. The charts included detailed instructions of how they were to be completed. The two samples we saw were completed accurately.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

 Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

 Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

 Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.
