Summary of this inspection

Why we carried out this inspection

This was a routine inspection to check that essential standards of quality and safety referred to on the front page were being met. We sometimes describe this as a scheduled inspection.

This was an unannounced inspection.

How we carried out this inspection

We looked at the personal care or treatment records of people who use the service, carried out a visit on 15 October 2013 and talked with staff.

What people told us and what we found

Our inspection on 25 June 2013 found recruitment procedures did not always include the relevant checks in line with the current regulations. Following the inspection, the provider sent us an action plan stating these issues would be addressed by 1 October 2013. We visited the hospital again to check the actions taken and found the necessary improvements had been made.

On this inspection we found the recruitment and references policies and procedures had been revised and updated. We also noted the necessary checks and documentation had been obtained prior to staff commencing work in the hospital. This ensured staff were suitably qualified and skilled to carry out their role safely and effectively.

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

Our judgements for each standard inspected

Requirements relating to workers

✓ Met this standard

People should be cared for by staff who are properly qualified and able to do their job

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People were cared for by suitably qualified, skilled and experienced staff.

Reasons for our judgement

On our last inspection on 25 June 2013, we found the recruitment procedures did not always include the relevant checks in order to ensure staff were suitably experienced and qualified for their work in the hospital. The provider sent us an action plan and stated the service would be compliant by 1 October 2013. On this inspection we found the necessary improvements had been made and the service was compliant with this outcome.

We found the recruitment and reference policies and procedures had been updated and ratified by the organisation. However, the provider may wish to note that the reference policies and procedures did not fully reflect the requirements listed in the current regulations. This is important so staff are guided to carry out the necessary checks as part of the recruitment process.

We looked at two staff files in detail. One person had not commenced working for the service and information was still being collated. The other person had completed the recruitment processes. We noted the staff member had completed a brief application form and submitted a curriculum vitae, which provided details of previous employment, experience and qualifications. There was a written explanation of gaps in employment.

Staff were issued with an appropriate job description at the time of application, so they were aware of the expectations of the role. We noted from the personal file looked at that two written references and appropriate Police checks had been carried out prior to the person commencing work in the hospital. Head office carried out checks with the Nursing and Midwifery Council for all new nursing staff and updated the check on an annual basis. Other professional registrations were checked with the Health and Care Professions Council, by staff at the hospital. We saw evidence of the checks during the inspection.

A recruitment checklist was maintained at a local and company level and the recruiting line manager and the hospital manager checked and signed off all recruitment documents before the person was eligible to work in the hospital. This meant robust checks were in place to ensure all the required documentation was in place before new staff commenced work.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

✓ Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

✗ Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

✗ Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.
