Summary of this inspection

Why we carried out this inspection

This was a routine inspection to check that essential standards of quality and safety referred to on the front page were being met. We sometimes describe this as a scheduled inspection.

This was an announced inspection.

How we carried out this inspection

We looked at the personal care or treatment records of people who use the service, carried out a visit on 13 June 2013, observed how people were being cared for and talked with staff.

What people told us and what we found

We carried out this inspection to see if the provider had made improvements following our last inspection. At the time of that inspection we had concerns that people who use the service were not protected from the risk of abuse. We also raised concerns that the provider did not have systems in place to assess and monitor the quality of the service. During this inspection we found the provider had made improvements and systems were in place to protect people and monitor the quality of the service.

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

Our judgements for each standard inspected

Safeguarding people who use services from abuse ✓ Met this standard

People should be protected from abuse and staff should respect their human rights

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

People who use the service were protected from the risk of abuse, because the provider had taken reasonable steps to identify the possibility of abuse and prevent abuse from happening.

Reasons for our judgement

At our last inspection we raised concerns that people were not protected from the risk of abuse as staff had not received training in safeguarding awareness and were unaware of the signs and types of abuse or their role in raising a concern. However people who used the service told us they felt safe at the service and never seen anything of concern. One person told us "If I didn't feel safe I would go somewhere else".

During this inspection we spoke with three members of staff. All had recently completed safeguarding awareness training and were able to describe signs of abuse for children and vulnerable adults and understood their role in raising any concerns. One staff member told us "I don't think I was familiar with that information before the training. It was eye opening, very beneficial". A second person told us "a lot of the training was very good; it's always good to refresh your memory with training". None of the staff we spoke with had ever seen anything of concern.

The provider has a clear safeguarding children policy which is available to all staff, along with the local authority safeguarding vulnerable adults' policy. This shows that people who use the service were protected from the risk of abuse, because the provider had taken reasonable steps to identify the possibility of abuse and prevent abuse from happening.

Assessing and monitoring the quality of service provision

✓ Met this standard

The service should have quality checking systems to manage risks and assure the health, welfare and safety of people who receive care

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

The provider had an effective system to regularly assess and monitor the quality of service that people receive.

Reasons for our judgement

At our last inspection we raised concerns that the provider did not have systems in place to assess and monitor the quality of the service that people receive.

During this inspection we saw the provider had developed a quality assurance policy which was displayed in the reception and waiting areas alongside the providers complaints policy.

We spoke with three members of staff who told us they had attended staff meetings and found them useful. We saw that meetings were held on different dates each month which ensured all staff had the opportunity to attend. Records of the meetings showed issues discussed included, infection control, updating cleaning records, uniform policy and CQC standards. One person told us " we don't all work full time so it is good to get everyone's input and make sure we are all singing from the same hymn sheet". A second person told us "we get a chance to have our say; the practice manager is very good at listening to your concerns". Staff told us they were able to raise concerns at any time and were confident they would be acted on. For example one person told us "I noticed some information was missing from the medical history sheets on the new recording system. I mentioned it at the meeting and it was fixed". This showed that staff were asked for their views about their care and treatment and they were acted on. We saw the provider carried out annual patient satisfaction surveys along with having a facility for people who use the service to leave comments or suggestions at the reception desk and in the waiting area. At the time of our inspection the patient survey was still in progress. This showed that people who use the service, their representatives and staff were asked for their views about their care and treatment.

We saw that effective quality monitoring systems were in place. This included reviews of cleanliness, infection control, electrical equipment, stock levels and maintenance of equipment. We also saw evidence of maintenance records, which showed all equipment and facilities, had recent safety checks. The provider had risk assessments in place for each area of the practice including the reception area, waiting room and surgery. We saw that action had been taken to reduce risks.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

 Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

 Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

 Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact – people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact – people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact – people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.
