Summary of this inspection

Why we carried out this inspection

We carried out this inspection to check whether Leacroft had taken action to meet the following essential standards:

- Meeting nutritional needs

This was an unannounced inspection.

How we carried out this inspection

We looked at the personal care or treatment records of people who use the service, carried out a visit on 17 September 2013 and talked with staff.

What people told us and what we found

Because of the nature of people's disabilities, we were not able to speak with any people living in the home.

We spoke with three staff. They all told us that there had been training in nutrition needs since the last inspection.

This was largely a positive inspection. The essential standard we reinspected had been found to have been met.

There were a number of suggestions made: for the menu to be more varied: for food to be cut up in the kitchen as needed rather than by staff as this took time and made food cold: the provision of better quality meat: and more choice of sandwich fillings served at teatime. The manager said these comments would be followed up.

You can see our judgements on the front page of this report.

More information about the provider

Please see our website www.cqc.org.uk for more information, including our most recent judgements against the essential standards. You can contact us using the telephone number on the back of the report if you have additional questions.

There is a glossary at the back of this report which has definitions for words and phrases we use in the report.

Our judgements for each standard inspected

Meeting nutritional needs

✓ Met this standard

Food and drink should meet people's individual dietary needs

Our judgement

The provider was meeting this standard.

The provider has met this regulation. People were protected from the risk of inadequate nutrition.

Reasons for our judgement

We found that the service had not fully protected people's welfare in relation to fully promoting their nutritional needs at the last inspection, so we followed up this issue.

We looked at the care plans for two people. They contained details essential information relating to food that people needed to improve their health. This gave staff relevant information to meet people's individual needs.

We looked at a care plan for a person who needed to have a soft diet to make sure that they did not choke on their food. We found there had been a referral to dietician. The dietician had given the service guidelines to follow to ensure the person's welfare was protected. This contained guidance such as keeping food and fluid charts to monitor people's eating and drinking. We found that staff had recorded this information. There had been proper oversight as to this person's food and fluid intake. This meant that their health had been protected.

We looked at another care plan. This was for a person who had diabetes. We found that there were guidelines in place for staff to follow as to foods that were needed.

We spoke with three staff members. They confirmed that since the last inspection there had been training in protecting people's nutritional needs. This meant that there was a better chance that people's health would be improved.

We saw evidence that staff had been trained on relevant issues such as providing a soft diet and providing a diabetic diet. There was a questionnaire in place for staff to complete as to their knowledge relating to diabetes.

We receive some comments to improve the service. This included providing better quality meat, making menus more varied including varying the content of sandwiches served at teatime. The manager later sent us information following up these issues.

The manager provided us with information on the food survey that had been carried out to seek the views of staff members. He said he would feedback the results of this survey to staff.

We looked at food menus. They appeared to be varied in general. There was no information about what type of sandwiches had been served. The manager said this would be added to records. This will then provide a check to ensure that varied sandwich fillings are provided to people.

About CQC inspections

We are the regulator of health and social care in England.

All providers of regulated health and social care services have a legal responsibility to make sure they are meeting essential standards of quality and safety. These are the standards everyone should be able to expect when they receive care.

The essential standards are described in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (Regulated Activities) Regulations 2010 and the Care Quality Commission (Registration) Regulations 2009. We regulate against these standards, which we sometimes describe as "government standards".

We carry out unannounced inspections of all care homes, acute hospitals and domiciliary care services in England at least once a year to judge whether or not the essential standards are being met. We carry out inspections of other services less often. All of our inspections are unannounced unless there is a good reason to let the provider know we are coming.

There are 16 essential standards that relate most directly to the quality and safety of care and these are grouped into five key areas. When we inspect we could check all or part of any of the 16 standards at any time depending on the individual circumstances of the service. Because of this we often check different standards at different times.

When we inspect, we always visit and we do things like observe how people are cared for, and we talk to people who use the service, to their carers and to staff. We also review information we have gathered about the provider, check the service's records and check whether the right systems and processes are in place.

We focus on whether or not the provider is meeting the standards and we are guided by whether people are experiencing the outcomes they should be able to expect when the standards are being met. By outcomes we mean the impact care has on the health, safety and welfare of people who use the service, and the experience they have whilst receiving it.

Our inspectors judge if any action is required by the provider of the service to improve the standard of care being provided. Where providers are non-compliant with the regulations, we take enforcement action against them. If we require a service to take action, or if we take enforcement action, we re-inspect it before its next routine inspection was due. This could mean we re-inspect a service several times in one year. We also might decide to re-inspect a service if new concerns emerge about it before the next routine inspection.

In between inspections we continually monitor information we have about providers. The information comes from the public, the provider, other organisations, and from care workers.

You can tell us about your experience of this provider on our website.

How we define our judgements

The following pages show our findings and regulatory judgement for each essential standard or part of the standard that we inspected. Our judgements are based on the ongoing review and analysis of the information gathered by CQC about this provider and the evidence collected during this inspection.

We reach one of the following judgements for each essential standard inspected.

✓ Met this standard This means that the standard was being met in that the provider was compliant with the regulation. If we find that standards were met, we take no regulatory action but we may make comments that may be useful to the provider and to the public about minor improvements that could be made.

✗ Action needed This means that the standard was not being met in that the provider was non-compliant with the regulation. We may have set a compliance action requiring the provider to produce a report setting out how and by when changes will be made to make sure they comply with the standard. We monitor the implementation of action plans in these reports and, if necessary, take further action. We may have identified a breach of a regulation which is more serious, and we will make sure action is taken. We will report on this when it is complete.

✗ Enforcement action taken If the breach of the regulation was more serious, or there have been several or continual breaches, we have a range of actions we take using the criminal and/or civil procedures in the Health and Social Care Act 2008 and relevant regulations. These enforcement powers include issuing a warning notice; restricting or suspending the services a provider can offer, or the number of people it can care for; issuing fines and formal cautions; in extreme cases, cancelling a provider or managers registration or prosecuting a manager or provider. These enforcement powers are set out in law and mean that we can take swift, targeted action where services are failing people.

Where we find non-compliance with a regulation (or part of a regulation), we state which part of the regulation has been breached. Only where there is non compliance with one or more of Regulations 9-24 of the Regulated Activity Regulations, will our report include a judgement about the level of impact on people who use the service (and others, if appropriate to the regulation). This could be a minor, moderate or major impact.

Minor impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had an impact on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The impact was not significant and the matter could be managed or resolved quickly.

Moderate impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a significant effect on their health, safety or welfare or there was a risk of this happening. The matter may need to be resolved quickly.

Major impact - people who use the service experienced poor care that had a serious current or long term impact on their health, safety and welfare, or there was a risk of this happening. The matter needs to be resolved quickly

We decide the most appropriate action to take to ensure that the necessary changes are made. We always follow up to check whether action has been taken to meet the standards.
